Botanical Overview Scientific Classification: Genus Rosa, family Rosaceae. Growth Habit: Roses are woody, perennial shrubs or vines. Depending on the species or cultivar, they can be erect, climbing, or trailing. Leaves: Typically, rose leaves are alternate and pinnately compound, usually with 5–9 leaflets that have serrated edges. Prickles: Commonly referred to as "thorns," these are technically prickles—outgrowths of the epidermis—that help protect the plant and aid in climbing.
